

Statutes Repeal Bill

Government Bill

As reported from the Government Administration Committee

Commentary

Recommendation

The Government Administration Committee has examined the Statutes Repeal Bill and recommends that it be passed with the amendments shown.

Introduction

The Statutes Repeal Bill is an omnibus bill. It seeks to repeal or partially repeal more than 100 Acts that are redundant or superfluous. These Acts are considered “spent”; that is, they are no longer needed because they have ceased to have any actual effect, have very limited effect, or are designed to achieve regulatory outcomes that are no longer relevant.

Additional Acts to be repealed

Schedule 1 of the bill lists the Acts that it would repeal. As a result of our consideration and the submissions we received, we recommend amending Schedule 1 to add the following Acts to that list:

- Education Law Amendment Act 1933 (1933 No 37)
- Infants Act Repeal Act 1989 (1989 No 145)
- Taxation Acts Repeal Act 1986 (1986 No 48)
- Wellington City Reserves Act 1872 (1872 No 13)
- Wellington City Reserves Act 1871 (1871 No 23), Section 4.

We are confident that the relevant parties have been consulted, and that the Acts can be repealed without any unintended consequences.

Repeal of the Sentencing Council Act 2007 and the Medicines Amendment Act 2013

We sought more information about the inclusion of the Sentencing Council Act and the Medicines Amendment Act in the bill.

The Sentencing Council Act came into force on 1 November 2007 but was not implemented. We understand that the Act is not latent or spent.<sup>1</sup> The explanatory note to the bill states that repealing the Act would clarify that the Government will not establish the Sentencing Council, and would allow the courts to retain their ability to develop their own sentencing guideline judgments.

We were advised that the regulatory outcome of the Sentencing Council Act is not relevant because the Sentencing Council has not been established, and the Government's policy is unchanged on this matter. We were told that repealing the Act is within the scope of the bill as introduced.

We heard from a submitter that refusal to give effect to a statute in force appears to be a significant constitutional matter in his view. New Zealand Labour Party and Green Party members of the committee agree with the concerns raised and consider that it would be more appropriate to repeal the Sentencing Council Act in a separate bill if the Government does not want this Act to be implemented.

Latent provisions of the Medicines Amendment Act are due to come into force on 1 July 2017. We were advised that these provisions are redundant due to a change in Government policy regarding the regulation of therapeutic products. This bill is currently the only means of repealing these provisions.

New Zealand Labour Party and Green Party members questioned the need for a Statutes Repeal Bill, and share the view expressed by a submitter that it may not be the most effective means of addressing legislative quality.

<sup>1</sup> "Latent" in this bill means legislation that has been enacted but has not yet come into force, but can be brought into force by Order in Council or on a default commencement date.
