Explanatory note

This note is not part of the order, but is intended to indicate its general effect.

This order, which comes into force on 1 November 2021, gives effect in New Zealand to the Hague Convention on the International Recovery of Child Support and Other Forms of Family Maintenance (the Convention). The Convention provides for the recognition and enforcement of both administrative and court-ordered maintenance when the liable person resides in a different country. Under the Child Support Act 1991 (the Act), child support may be sought in respect of a qualifying child from any person who is a New Zealand citizen or is ordinarily resident in New Zealand or in a country with which New Zealand has entered into a reciprocal agreement for enforcement of child support. Under the Convention, New Zealand will be able to transmit administratively assessed, as well as court-ordered, maintenance cases to member countries for enforcement. For a list of countries, see <https://www.hcch.net/en/instruments/conventions/status-table/?cid=131>

The Convention was concluded in 2007 and was signed by New Zealand on 26 November 2019. The New Zealand international treaty examination of the Convention took place in early 2020.

The order declares that the provisions contained in the Convention have force and effect so far as they relate to New Zealand, and that the provisions of the Act and of the regulations and orders in force under the Act have effect subject to modifications that are required for the purpose of giving effect to the Convention.
